With the rapid expansion of technology, electronics such as mobile devices, laptops, computers, servers, routers, monitors, televisions, and printers are continually being replaced, creating a vast amount of e-waste each year. These discarded electronics often end up in landfills or are exported to countries with little to no environmental or pollution regulations, which can have a major environmental impact in our communities, and in other areas of the world. Many of the materials found in electronic devices are extremely hazardous. This includes lead, mercury, and cadmium. When mishandled, these devices can release toxins into the soil and/or atmosphere. In addition to the environmental concerns, many devices contain personal information, creating another means in which your identity can be stolen.

METech Recycling encourages you to collect your old electronics and recycle them responsibly. At METech, your electronics will be properly recycled, and data containing devices will be destroyed in a safe and secure manner, compliant with the highest standards in the industry. Simply press the button below to start the process and have the comfort of knowing that your electronic devices and sensitive data will be handled properly, while protecting you and the environment.

The Recycling Coalition of Utah (RCU), we share a common goal in increasing and improving solid waste reduction, reuse, and recycling throughout Utah through education, advocacy, outreach and developing the legislative and market framework to make recycling an economic and environmentally sound success for all recyclers in our state. We are a primary resource for recycling in Utah. Check out their website for where you can recycle specific products like plastics, electronics, construction waste, green waste, glass, hazardous waste, printers and accessories, automotive, batteries, appliances, cloth and fabric, car seats, Styrofoam, metal and paper throughout the state.
